Firm Highlights

Independent (100% employee-owned) and focused exclusively on investment management

Built upon the tenets of institutional investing

Proprietary fundamental research as cornerstone of investment approach since 1958

Dedicated teams of investment specialists with shared investment principles

Singular Focus On The Investment Success Of Clients

Denver Investments is in one business: serving clients as a fiduciary in the management of their investment assets. This allows the firm to focus its resources on one goal: the pursuit of superior investment returns over the long term for its clients. Denver Investments believes that its organizational independence helps align its interests with its clients, which enhances its ability to promote their investment success.

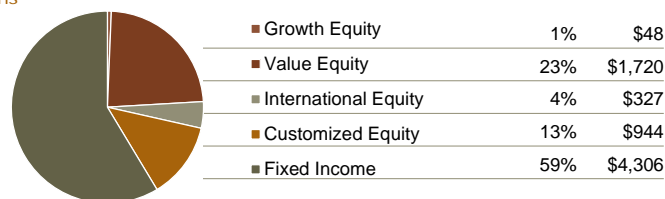

Research-Driven Organization

Denver Investments is a research-driven organization founded on the belief that original fundamental research is the key driver of value-added management. Since the inception of the firm's investment management services in 1958, proprietary fundamental research has been the cornerstone of the firm's investment approach. Today, the firm manages assets for a broad array of individual and institutional investors, including corporate and public pension plans, multi-employer plans, foundations and endowments, healthcare organizations, insurance companies, and financial intermediaries.

Team Focus And Shared Investment Principles

Across the firm's investment disciplines, there are several hallmarks of the approach that the firm believes are important to its pursuit of consistently strong risk-adjusted performance for clients:

- Dedicated teams of investment specialists
 The firm's investment professionals are organized into focused teams. Denver Investments believes this specialization is essential in its pursuit to add value through active management because it empowers each team to implement the investment approach that it believes works best in the team's asset class or strategy.
- Shared investment principles
 While each investment team has a distinct philosophy and process, all teams share a common approach: a disciplined and consistently applied investment process, grounded in proprietary research.
- A team-focused decision-making approach
 The team-focused approach recognizes the value of intellectual rigor in the decision-making process and is designed to take full advantage of both individual insights and the collective expertise of the team. The firm believes the collaborative discussion and debate of each investment idea helps clients receive each team's best ideas.

Institutional Investment Expertise

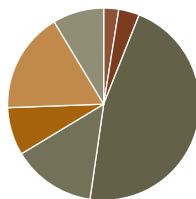

The tenets of institutional investing have defined Denver Investments since its founding – a prudent investment approach and a disciplined and consistently applied investment process. Over the years, the firm has gained a deep understanding of institutional investors' needs and developed multi-asset investment capabilities to meet those needs.

Denver Investments offers its investment expertise through a broad range of actively managed disciplines in areas where it believes it can add value. These include growth, value, and international small-cap equities, as well as core and non-core fixed income strategies. The firm manages these disciplines on a separate account basis and through its Westcore family of mutual funds.
